Project Information (EN)

The connection to the "Symbiocene" is revealed here in his creative process. In each layer of coffee, in each application, there is a dialogue with nature, with an element that comes from the earth and human interaction. As in the "Symbiocene" where active collaboration with nature seeks to regenerate and restore, Adrián embarks on a journey of discovery and study. The decision to stop and observe the transformation and conservation process echoes the necessary reflection in the "Symbiocene" era. The pause reveals a search for harmony and balance, an attempt to understand the interaction between his work and the natural elements that compose it. From the blank canvas through the meticulous drops that reflect an intimate connection and the artist's insight. The Café's process, in its gradualness and exploration, reflects the vision of an artist seeking a symbiotic relationship with his creative environment, a collaboration and interdependence, values that resonate with the "Symbiocene." As Adrián perfected his technique, he added ash to the mix to enhance the darker tones. When burned, these sources reflect the fragility of the environment, combined with global warming and the fleeting nature of our passage through time. Thus, his work calls for reflection and collaboration with the natural world.
